Enchanting scenery and charming harbour towns – the stunning islands of Sardinia, Corsica and Elba: Rome (Civitavecchia) – Rome (Civitavecchia)

The beautiful Costa Smeralda
The emerald coast certainly lives up to its name; its waters sparkle and shimmer like a jewel with tones of green, blue and turquoise, “framed” by snow-white rock faces and beaches. This coastal area first became known in the 1960s through the Aga Khan, who protected the coast from architectural eye-sores whilst preserving the area’s natural beauty and creating stylish, picturesque holiday resorts.

The natural bay of Bonifacio
Sailing into Bonifacio is quite simply a spectacular experience – a steep, shimmering white chalk cliff, a small town that appears to be floating magnificently on the plateau and a fjord-like bay which gives way to an elegant marina. Those who wish may explore the area’s medieval upper town or take a stroll along the promenade.

Alghero: Sardinia’s “Little Barcelona”
Following the Phoenicians, the Carthaginians, Saracen pirates and the Genoese, Alghero was conquered in 1354 by the Catalans. Many inhabitants still speak Catalan today and they lovingly refer to their city as “Little Barcelona”. A gentle stroll along the walkway that crowns Alghero’s impressive sea walls promises majestic views of the picturesque harbour on one side and the Gothic old town on the other.

Charming Corsica:
Saint Florent and Nebbio
Whilst the harbour town of Saint Florent with its luxury yachts reminds of some of the hallmarks of St Tropez, in the winding alleys of its rustic old town, you will encounter true Corsican charm. The delightful town of Saint Florent is the capital of the fertile Nebbio region, stunning views of which can be enjoyed from the black tower overlooking the small village of Nonza.

Sea Cloud
Sea Cloud – Cruises
57
Sardinia
Corsica
Bonifacio
Enchanting scenery and charming harbour towns – the stunning islands of Sardinia, Corsica and Elba: Rome (Civitavecchia) – Rome (Civitavecchia)

The beautiful Costa Smeralda
The emerald coast certainly lives up to its name; its waters sparkle and shimmer like a jewel with tones of green, blue and turquoise, “framed” by snow-white rock faces and beaches. This coastal area first became known in the 1960s through the Aga Khan, who protected the coast from architectural eye-sores whilst preserving the area’s natural beauty and creating stylish, picturesque holiday resorts.

The natural bay of Bonifacio
Sailing into Bonifacio is quite simply a spectacular experience – a steep, shimmering white chalk cliff, a small town that appears to be floating magnificently on the plateau and a fjord-like bay which gives way to an elegant marina. Those who wish may explore the area’s medieval upper town or take a stroll along the promenade.

Alghero: Sardinia’s “Little Barcelona”
Following the Phoenicians, the Carthaginians, Saracen pirates and the Genoese, Alghero was conquered in 1354 by the Catalans. Many inhabitants still speak Catalan today and they lovingly refer to their city as “Little Barcelona”. A gentle stroll along the walkway that crowns Alghero’s impressive sea walls promises majestic views of the picturesque harbour on one side and the Gothic old town on the other.

Charming Corsica:
Saint Florent and Nebbio
Whilst the harbour town of Saint Florent with its luxury yachts reminds of some of the hallmarks of St Tropez, in the winding alleys of its rustic old town, you will encounter true Corsican charm. The delightful town of Saint Florent is the capital of the fertile Nebbio region, stunning views of which can be enjoyed from the black tower overlooking the small village of Nonza.

Sea Cloud
Sea Cloud – Cruises
57
Sardinia
Corsica
Bonifacio
Enchanting scenery and charming harbour towns – the stunning islands of Sardinia, Corsica and Elba: Rome (Civitavecchia) – Rome (Civitavecchia)

The beautiful Costa Smeralda
The emerald coast certainly lives up to its name; its waters sparkle and shimmer like a jewel with tones of green, blue and turquoise, “framed” by snow-white rock faces and beaches. This coastal area first became known in the 1960s through the Aga Khan, who protected the coast from architectural eye-sores whilst preserving the area’s natural beauty and creating stylish, picturesque holiday resorts.

The natural bay of Bonifacio
Sailing into Bonifacio is quite simply a spectacular experience – a steep, shimmering white chalk cliff, a small town that appears to be floating magnificently on the plateau and a fjord-like bay which gives way to an elegant marina. Those who wish may explore the area’s medieval upper town or take a stroll along the promenade.

Alghero: Sardinia’s “Little Barcelona”
Following the Phoenicians, the Carthaginians, Saracen pirates and the Genoese, Alghero was conquered in 1354 by the Catalans. Many inhabitants still speak Catalan today and they lovingly refer to their city as “Little Barcelona”. A gentle stroll along the walkway that crowns Alghero’s impressive sea walls promises majestic views of the picturesque harbour on one side and the Gothic old town on the other.

Charming Corsica:
Saint Florent and Nebbio
Whilst the harbour town of Saint Florent with its luxury yachts reminds of some of the hallmarks of St Tropez, in the winding alleys of its rustic old town, you will encounter true Corsican charm. The delightful town of Saint Florent is the capital of the fertile Nebbio region, stunning views of which can be enjoyed from the black tower overlooking the small village of Nonza.

Sea Cloud
Sea Cloud – Cruises
57
Sardinia
Corsica
Bonifacio
Enchanting scenery and charming harbour towns – the stunning islands of Sardinia, Corsica and Elba: Rome (Civitavecchia) – Rome (Civitavecchia)

The beautiful Costa Smeralda
The emerald coast certainly lives up to its name; its waters sparkle and shimmer like a jewel with tones of green, blue and turquoise, “framed” by snow-white rock faces and beaches. This coastal area first became known in the 1960s through the Aga Khan, who protected the coast from architectural eye-sores whilst preserving the area’s natural beauty and creating stylish, picturesque holiday resorts.

The natural bay of Bonifacio
Sailing into Bonifacio is quite simply a spectacular experience – a steep, shimmering white chalk cliff, a small town that appears to be floating magnificently on the plateau and a fjord-like bay which gives way to an elegant marina. Those who wish may explore the area’s medieval upper town or take a stroll along the promenade.

Alghero: Sardinia’s “Little Barcelona”
Following the Phoenicians, the Carthaginians, Saracen pirates and the Genoese, Alghero was conquered in 1354 by the Catalans. Many inhabitants still speak Catalan today and they lovingly refer to their city as “Little Barcelona”. A gentle stroll along the walkway that crowns Alghero’s impressive sea walls promises majestic views of the picturesque harbour on one side and the Gothic old town on the other.

Charming Corsica:
Saint Florent and Nebbio
Whilst the harbour town of Saint Florent with its luxury yachts reminds of some of the hallmarks of St Tropez, in the winding alleys of its rustic old town, you will encounter true Corsican charm. The delightful town of Saint Florent is the capital of the fertile Nebbio region, stunning views of which can be enjoyed from the black tower overlooking the small village of Nonza.

Sea Cloud
Sea Cloud – Cruises
57
Sardinia
Corsica
Bonifacio
Enchanting scenery and charming harbour towns – the stunning islands of Sardinia, Corsica and Elba: Rome (Civitavecchia) – Rome (Civitavecchia)

The beautiful Costa Smeralda
The emerald coast certainly lives up to its name; its waters sparkle and shimmer like a jewel with tones of green, blue and turquoise, “framed” by snow-white rock faces and beaches. This coastal area first became known in the 1960s through the Aga Khan, who protected the coast from architectural eye-sores whilst preserving the area’s natural beauty and creating stylish, picturesque holiday resorts.

The natural bay of Bonifacio
Sailing into Bonifacio is quite simply a spectacular experience – a steep, shimmering white chalk cliff, a small town that appears to be floating magnificently on the plateau and a fjord-like bay which gives way to an elegant marina. Those who wish may explore the area’s medieval upper town or take a stroll along the promenade.

Alghero: Sardinia’s “Little Barcelona”
Following the Phoenicians, the Carthaginians, Saracen pirates and the Genoese, Alghero was conquered in 1354 by the Catalans. Many inhabitants still speak Catalan today and they lovingly refer to their city as “Little Barcelona”. A gentle stroll along the walkway that crowns Alghero’s impressive sea walls promises majestic views of the picturesque harbour on one side and the Gothic old town on the other.

Charming Corsica:
Saint Florent and Nebbio
Whilst the harbour town of Saint Florent with its luxury yachts reminds of some of the hallmarks of St Tropez, in the winding alleys of its rustic old town, you will encounter true Corsican charm. The delightful town of Saint Florent is the capital of the fertile Nebbio region, stunning views of which can be enjoyed from the black tower overlooking the small village of Nonza.